Training materials ready to use

The training materials are the main product of REaCT: Raising Equality and Cultural Tolerance project. On European scale the project directly addressed common challenging issue in all European countries which is reluctance to migrants. Intellectual outputs working phase. To reach the project objectives partners' institutions searched for innovative teaching methods that would be tested in this specific context. Those methods were gathered in the training Pack available on-line, ready to implement and use by adult training centres across Europe. Before the first transnational meeting partners did some research work about innovative methods and already existing learning tools related to this topic. These materials and especially the first-hand experiences of our trainers were shared during meetings. The starting point for the intellectual output was the exchange of best national practices and the experience from already existing materials. During each international learning sessions trainers from all countries worked together testing those methods in intercultural environment. Every sessions was completed with evaluation, written reports and division of tasks with regards to methods description that should be done in between meeting. The design of the training module and manual was a direct result of the teachers working experiences. All modules were translated in partners languages and published online.

Meeting in IDEC facilities

Previously project partners met in Greece in IDEC facilities. Partners had a chance to meet in the place where NGO Young Women Christian Association has got the office. The movement is working for the empowerment, leadership and rights of women, young women and girls in more than 120 countries. The members and supporters include women from many different faiths, ages, backgrounds, beliefs and cultures. During the meeting partner worked on the development of the training materials and the graphic design. At the end of meeting partners visited one of the facilities of the Club for UNESCO of Piraeus and Islands which was a house for homeless people. This is an affiliated NGO with UNESCO allowed to use their brand and work towards promoting the values and goals of UNESCO. Their homeless shelter (one of 3 now operational) actively supports underprivileged people and was a center of support during the Refugee crisis of 2016 - 2017. Anna Papadopoulou, the Director of the shelter, showed us their facilities and provided detailed description of their actions. Apart from giving homeless people place to sleep from 9pm to 9am, they provide meals, baths, cleaning service and support by a psychologist and a job counselor. The main aim is to give people hope and will to change their current situation. After the presentation project partners watched some adverts about the organisation. There was a discussion on the different types of support giving to homeless / immigrants in different countries.
